

Testimonial – Ebony Stiles (Professional School Counselor)

As a high school senior, I recall the stress of completing college and scholarship applications as well as preparing myself for ACT testing. I was always a great student academically heading for college; however, I just could not get a grasp of necessary steps. I went to the school counselor, who was somewhat helpful in the process. We had some discussions and the school had a room full of college stuff: college books, scholarship books, and pamphlets without much guidance to understand all these books. It can be frustrating, and I get it. I am very grateful to have good people in my community who advised and directed me to The Infinite Scholars Program in February 2004. Entering the venue, I was enthused and receptive of the energy flowing through the room from various college/ university representatives and high school students seeking a collegiate opportunity as well. I was fortunate to have comrades who knew of and promoted a specific historically black university as a great opportunity to expand my knowledge in education. Within an hour, I applied and received acceptance to attend Alabama Agricultural and Mechanical University with a satisfying scholarship. I was ecstatic to the point of tears, because I worked hard for this moment and Infinite Scholars helped me to get where I am today. Never give up on the journey towards college education and scholarship funding. The PUSH in you is well worth it.
